INSTRUCTORS ENGAGED FOR LOCAL INSTITUTE

Dr. Colestock of Bucknell to be Among Speakers

PLANS ARE UNDER WAY

Charleroi to Entertain at First Teachers Institute of Kind in Valley

The teacher's institute to be held at Charleroi the first week of September for the teachers of Monongahela, Donora and Charleroi, will be featured by the presence of some of the most noted instructors in the country.

Committees are getting arrangements in shape for the institute. Upon the return of Prof. Thomas L. Pollock, superintendent of the Charleroi schools, from Chautauqua, definite announcements will be made as to the place for the holding of the institute and as to the final arrangements. It has been proposed by some of the business men of Charleroi that a reception be given for the teachers while they are here and if agreeable the idea may be carried into effect.

Among the instructors for the institute will be:

Dr. Colestock, of Bucknell University; Dr. Foss, a member of the House of Representatives from Ohio; Dr. J. George Decht, Secretary of the State Board of Education, Harrisburg; Mrs. Mary G. Noss of the California Normal; Mrs. Alice M. Carmant, assistant professor of elementary education, University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Henry S. Curtis, former secretary of the Playground Association of America; Miss Ada Van Stone Harris, University of Pittsburgh; and Prof. Charles Dobson of the California Normal music department.

PARTY GIVEN AS BIRTHDAY EVENT

Manager R. L. Barnhart of the Palace theatre is announcing a three-reel picture for production on Saturday, "The Stain," a story of love sorrow and happiness.

"The Stain" is a wonderful society drama, being a story that deals with circumstantial evidence, showing that the "god of love can do no wrong."

Duquesne to Hold Outing.

Arrangements are being made by the Duquesne board of commerce for their annual outing and home coming of the town to be held at Kennywood park on Saturday, August 16. A good program has been arranged.

Boys Killed On the Rail

Two Lads Meet Death Near Webster in a Railroad Accident.

Two boys were instantly killed at Turkey Run, east of Webster at 12:13 Tuesday by a passenger train on the Lake Erie railroad. The exact nature of the accident could not be learned.

The dead boys are Fred Harrison, aged 11 years, whose home is in Donora and George Golden, aged 11 years who lives in Webster.

The dead boys are Fred Harrison, aged 11 years, whose home is in Donora and George Golden, aged 11 years who lives in Webster.

The bodies were brought to the Webster station and were later taken to their homes. The remains of both the lads are badly mutilated.

It is stated the boys were playing along the track and not noticing the approaching train were struck and killed.

EXCURSION OF ELKS IS BIG EVENT

Charleroi Lodge No. 494 Holds An Enjoyable Outing

GOES TO BROWNSVILLE

The biggest kind of a success was realized by Charleroi Lodge, No. 494, B. P. O. Elks Thursday when they held their annual outing. The outing was in the form of two boat excursions, one in the afternoon and one in the afternoon and one in the evening. Both were on the "Morning Star" excursion steamer to Brownsville and return.

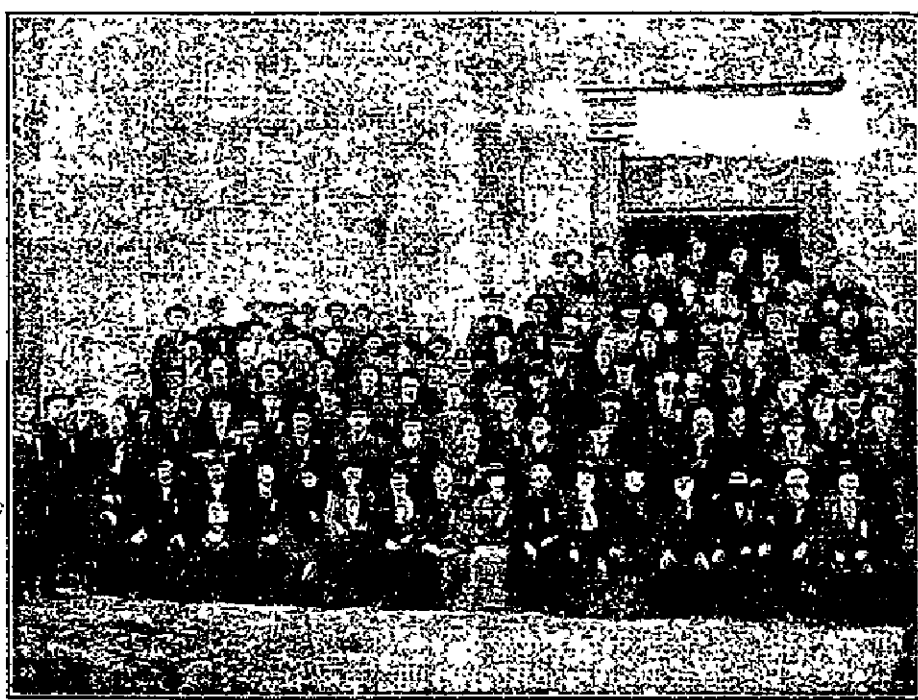

In the afternoon the boat left Charleroi fact the afternoon excursion including a large number of children. In fact that the afternoon excursion was largely for the children. Children of members of the lodge were taken along.

The boat left for the evening excursion at about 6:30 o'clock. Although the intention had been to go to Rices Landing, Brownsville was considered far enough, owing to the rapidly rising river. Dancing was a feature. During the entire evening Elks and their friends joined in the whirl and the gaiety of the occasion. The excursion was novel and unusual and consequently very diverting. The return trip was made late at night. The committee consisting of George W. Night, Burgess George W. Risbeck, David M. McCloskey, Pierce Ferguson and Roland W. Brown, looked well to the entertainment of the guests.

ONLY OFFICER OF RINGGOLD CALVARY ALIVE TO BE HERE

Col. A. J. Greenfield to Attend Reunion of Famous Regiment at Monessen--Has Never Yet Missed Gathering--Plans Arranged

Members of the Ringgold Battalion are anticipating their annual reunion to be held at Monessen next Thursday with a great deal of pleasure and the reunion will be featured as usual by the presence of Col. A. J. Greenfield of Chicago, Ill., who perhaps is the only man who never missed a reunion of the battalion. Years ago when a reunion was held in Charleroi he was present and made a stirring address. Col. Greenfield is probably the most noted living member of the famous command. He is the only surviving regimental officer.

In a sense Charleroi is the central town of the region from which the Ringgold calvary was recruited. The company went out from Beallsville in the early sixties and became one of the most noted of Civil War companies. Pitted against the Ringgold—known as the twenty-second Pennsylvania Calvary—were the McNeill Rangers. Nearly every year that a reunion is held by the Ringolds some of the McNeill command are present. There are many more survivors however of the Ringolds than there are of the McNeill men.

This year's reunion of the Ringolds will be the thirty-ninth. There are comparatively few survivors and those who meet this year at Monessen will be impressed with the ironies death has made in their ranks. Last year the reunion was held in Beallsville and the year before in Belle Vernon.

The citizens committee of Monessen, acting under auspices of the Monessen board of trade are arranging to give the heroes of the Ringgold Battalion a royal welcome. Automobiles will be furnished to the old soldiers for the evening parade, which will start at Seventh street and Duquesne avenue at 6:00 under the escort of the Sons of Veterans from Donora.

COUNCILMANIC POSSIBILITIES MENTIONED

With the warming up of political affairs the names of possible candidates for council are being mentioned. So far, however, few have announced. John W. Carroll the Fall-loughfield druggist and business man is being urged by his friends to enter the field and is considered a possibility on the Republican ticket. Samuel Michener has announced as a candidate on the Democratic ticket. William H. Calvert who is now a councilman might make the run for nomination as a Republican. Herman A. Heupel, it is believed, will enter the fight as a Washington party candidate.

Misses Anna Teitelbaum and Bertha Goldsmith have returned to New York City after visiting here.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO BE TAKEN ON TROLLEY TRIP

Newspaper men from the Monongahela valley and from inter-county points are to be taken on a trip over the Pittsburgh Railways line tomorrow at the invitation of J. E. McKirdy, advertising manager of the company. There will be a special car leave Charleroi at 8 o'clock in the morning, where those from Charleroi and surrounding towns will board it.

The first stop of importance will be at Murphy's big stock farm at Meadowslands. From there the party will be taken to the Washington fair grounds for an inspection. Following that the party will go to Pittsburgh to get lunch, with a ball game between two teams of the Federal league as a side attraction. Also the newspaper men will probably be taken by Mr. McKirdy to the Pittsburgh Motorhome to see the motorcycle demonstrations perform.

NEW RULES FOR PARCEL POST GO INTO EFFECT

County Asks Greenhouse

Institution Desired as a Part of the County Home at Arden

The poor board has asked the grand jury now sitting to approve a petition for the erection of a greenhouse at the county home. The county commissioners have approved the project. Judge McIlvaine yesterday explained to the grand jury their duties and powers in such matters. The proposed greenhouse is to cost $1,100 and will be used to start plants and raise early vegetables.

STORAGE LAW NOW IN FORCE

State Commissioner Proposes to See That It is Effective

DIXON GIVES OUT STORY

The new state cold storage law went into effect Thursday and the opening of the first day under it found retail dealers in butter and eggs striving to comply with its regulations. Retail dealers in meats and fish over the state generally, were somewhat dubious about the extent of the enactment. Meat and fish dealers say this is the season for fresh foods and that little cold storage sea foods are being sold. The majority, however, have ordered cold storage stamps.

"We have issued fifty-nine licenses with a number of applications on file, pending examinations by chemists to determine condition and availability of plants," said Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust. "Fifteen licenses have been issued in Philadelphia, where I might say we have had the heartiest co-operation from the managers of plants. Erie is second with nine plants. Pittsburgh has four and Reading two. No applications have been rejected as yet, but we have advised two plants in Philadelphia to make some changes in condition by September 1. These are minor details and I have no doubt will be attended to without delay as managers realize that the state wants to help them. Experts are now on the job making inspections throughout the state and on their reports more licenses will be issued."

"There will be a general housecleaning as a result of the act and the people need have no fear of the goods sent out from cold storage warehouses," the commissioner said, "because all must be marked, and stuff which has been in storage beyond the time limit fixed by the act

High Cost of Living Given Another Severe Swat

MAY SHIP NOW BY MAIL

Household Necessities May be Sent—Weight Limits Are Changed

Housewives with the assistance of Uncle Sam and the agency of his postoffice department are able to give another swat to the "high-cost-of-living" bugbear with the new parcel post regulations in effect today. Besides reducing the rate cost the new law also permits the mailing of butter, lard, fish, fresh meats, dressed fowls, vegetables, fruits, berries, and articles of similar nature, which decay quickly in the first and second zones, "when inclosed in an inner cover and a strong outer cover of wood, metal, heavy corrugated paste-board or other suitable material and wrapped so that nothing can leak from the package."

Extending the mailable distance of perishable foods to the second zone, 150 miles from Charleroi in any direction, opens a broad area of farming country to Charleroi. Previously foods likely to decay were mailable only in the first zone—or within a radius of 50 miles. The opportunity now afforded to local housewives is declared to be a great one, coupling the extension of distance with a marked decrease in rates.

One postmaster says: "Tried as an experiment, the parcel post gradually is becoming an immense help to housewives. The department a month ago discarded the special parcel post stamp. Now the weight limit is advanced from 11 to 20 pounds and the rate from the second zone out of Pittsburgh on an 11-pound package is reduced from 45 to 15 cents. The new rate for a parcel weighing more than five pounds sent from the second zone to Pittsburgh is slightly more than a cent a pound. One cent a pound is mighty cheap and if the carrying continues to show a profit, I see no reason why the weight limit should not be raised still farther."

General order No. 7349, issued by Postmaster General A. S. Burleson, and which is in effect today regulates the parcel post rate as follows:

"The rate of postage on parcels exceeding four ounces in weight shall be five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof, when intended for local delivery and five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof when intended for delivery at other offices within the first and second zones."

THE FAMILY REUNION.

This is the season of the family reunion, the time of year when the folk
bound together by blood and name
meet together for a day and renew
the old friendship and talk over the old times, says the Washington Reporter.

"The family reunion is an excellent
institution. It gives members of
families opportunity to get acquainted with each other and find out what
sort of people there are within the bounds of their family. Too often in
the hurly-burly of present day existence relationships beyond immediate
family ties are almost forgotten and
the only place where cousins and un-
cles and aunts meet is at the funeral
of some member of the connection.

"It is a mistake for families to become so far divided that the various
members lose all track of one another.
Blood should be thicker than water
even if that does not always seem to be the case. The family reunion
is one big thing which tends to bring
members of families together, on a satisfactory footing. The family reunion rightly handled should be a large means toward doing away with
many of the old family feuds which
have made so much unhappiness and
misery in the world.

"Of late years the family reunion
idea has been gaining many adher-ents. Every year sees more of these
pleasant and profitable gatherings
held. Washington county and this general section of the country have
been especially progressive in this direction.

"May the family reunion be a permanent institution. May the idea grow
and spread so that one day cousins
even many times removed will at least
be able to recognize each other when
they chance to meet."

MUNICIPAL EXTRAVAGANCE

Possible legal and practical objections wholly aside, would it not be a
fine idea if the bonds of a city could
be widely distributed in small amounts
among a large number of its citizens,
asks the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A municipal bond tucked away
with the bank book in a bureau drawer or a pigeonhole of the desk at home or placed in a safety deposit

box would be a material emblem of
one's partnership in government affairs. It would be a tremendous incentive for a person to keep posted
on what that government was doing.
It would encourage the bond owner
to protest at city hall extravagance,
at wastefulness and inefficiency.

Perhaps the day will arrive when it
will be possible for a person to buy
municipal bonds in small denominations, as easily as he can now deposit his savings in a bank. Pity any man attempting to debase a city government whose debt is held
by its own people. His days would
be too few to be worth numbering.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Sherwood Magee was still harping
on a close decision which Umpire
Bill Klem had given against the Phillies in an early inning when another close play came in the fifth.
Again the opposing team was favored.

"That's two you gave them, Bill,"
Magee shot at Klem.

The game raged along so close a
run would have decided the issue
either way. One of the opposing batters lifted a fly to left. There were two on the bases. Magee played the lick poorly and muffed the ball.
The two baserunners crossed the plate with what proved to be the winning runs.

Magee tried to avoid Klem as he
walked to the bench after the inning,
but Bill was alert. He sauntered
close to Magee and said:

"I didn't give them those two, did
I?"

Jones was showing his wife and her friend, Mrs. Brown, around the new offices. He left them in the waiting room for a few minutes,
while he answered a telephone call,
and the conversation between the two
women drifted to household matters.
"And have you put up much fruit
this year, Mrs. Jones?" asked Mrs.
Brown.

"Not very much so far," answered
Mrs. Jones; "but," as her gaze wandered across the room, where several
pretty stenographers were working,
"I intend to can a few peaches very soon."—Judge.

JUSTICE SHOWS

HOW GRAFTING
IS MADE EASY

After admitting in open court the
truth of charges of extortion brought against him E. C. Fullick, former
justice of the peace in Canonsburg
on Thursday made public an affidavit in which he calmly recites methods
in vogue among grafting peace officers, tells how he carried on his own
schemes of extortion and makes
charges of the most serious nature
against 10 constables of the Canons-
burg district.

Fullick declares he stands ready to
give the district attorney all possible
aid in cleaning up the grafters and urges a further investigation of the claims he makes.

He states that he took up his duties
as a justice in December 1911. The day after he opened his office, he alleges, Constable John Miller of Canonsburg, came to him and offered to
give him a few pointers in the justice
business. He declares Miller told him
it would not do to jump in and close
things up as the people were accustomed to a wide-open town. Fullick says that Miller took him on a round of sightseeing. Fullick recounts visits to places apparently operating in violation of the law
where he says he saw money paid to the constable.

Miller, according to Fullick was in
partnership with another constable
named Crum and Fullick says that he and the two constables entered into a business arrangement by which
all three profited.

Living Cups and Saucers.

The foot of the limpet is a kind of
sucking disk by which it anchors itself
securely to the rocks. Its tiny tongue
is in reality a wonderful horny structure armed with about 100 rows of
teeth, with which it rasps the sea-
weeds and marine litter which form
its food.

There are several branches of the limpet family. One is called the "key
hole" limpet and another the "cup and saucer." The former owes its name
to a keyhole shaped opening on the
top through which the animal—for the limpet is really an animal—squirts out
water.

The "cup and saucer" limpet has on
its underside a sort of curved plate,
not unlike a tiny teacup, surrounded
by a saucer-like shell. To complete the resemblance there is at the extremity
of the long tooth ribbon an organ not
unlike a miniature teaspoon.

Mental Originality.

Anatole France coined a phrase
which may have the breath of life in
it. "What is madness after all," he
says, "but a sort of mental originality?" He writes that Charles Dickens
always liked madmen and cites among
the madmen good Mr. Dick in "David Copperfield," whose innocence is described with such tender grace. "I believe," writes the great Frenchman
of letters, "that Dickens had more feeling than any other writer. I believe that his novels are as beautiful
as the love and pity that inspired
them. I regard 'David Copperfield' as a new gospel. I believe, lastly, that
Mr. Dick is a 'sensible' madman, because the only reason left to him is
the reasoning of the heart, and that is hardly ever received. What matter if
he does fly kites on which he has written some reflections concerning
the death of King Charles I? He is
benevolent, he wishes ill to no one,
and that is a piece of wisdom to which
many sane men do not so easily attain
as he."

Involuntary Fasting.

A remarkable feat of involuntary
fasting was performed twelve years
ago by a corporal in a regiment of French colonial infantry. On his way
to work one morning a man heard
cries proceeding from a disused mine
near Brest. At the bottom of an excavation nearly 100 feet deep Corporal
Andre Desrats was found in so weak
a condition that he could scarcely articulate a word. When he recovered
his rescuers learned that after accidentally falling into the mine Desrats
had been imprisoned for twenty-eight
days without anything to eat or drink.
But a pig can beat a man. Dr. W. B.
Carpenter in his "Manual of Physiology" records that a pig weighing 160
pounds was entombed by the fall of a portion of the chalk cliffs at Dover
it was dug out 160 days later and found to be still alive, but reduced in weight to forty pounds.—London Mail

An Author - Publisher

By ANDREW C. EWING

Leslie Robinson was the son of a publisher. His father said to him one day when the boy was much elated at being made editor of the high school Banner: "My boy, don't get the literary fever. A great many catch it, and only those recover in whom the literary parasites find nothing to feed on. I fear you have just enough talent for writing to make you uncomfortable all your life."

Also, the young are not so constituted as to take the advice of the old. Perhaps this is best as it is. It is not success that brings happiness; it is striving for success. But in literary work for all but one in a million there are constant disappointments.

Young Robinson was so unfortunate, according to his father's idea, when he went to college as to be made editor of the university magazine. His essays received the highest marks. He was unconscious of the fact that the reason they took high rank was because those with which they competed were of no value as literary productions.

Mr. Robinson, Sr., died while his son was in college. The publishing business, by the late owner's injunction, was to be carried on. Till Leslie was graduated, by the junior partner, after which the son was to manage the interests he had inherited. He proved to have business capacity and soon became the brains of the establishment.

Perhaps if Leslie Robinson had appreciated his business talents he might have lost his desire for literary eminence. He considered himself rather born to literature than to business. Finding time to manage a publishing house and scribble at the same time he did both. He sent articles to the magazines, and they were always accepted. They were good articles, so that it was not necessary for Mr. Robinson to ask how much their acceptance was due to their merit and how much to their having been offered by the head of the publishing house of Robinson & Co.

After awhile Mr. Robinson brought out a novel. It was accepted by the first publisher to whom it was offered. Robinson scorned to publish it himself. He said that the test of a good book is that a business man will risk his money on it. It cost several thousand dollars to get out an edition of a book, and unless the article was of sufficient merit to insure a return it would not find a publisher. He was still young in the business or he would have known that the higher the type the less the profit. The poor Browning would have starved had he been forced to live on the income he derived from his poems.

Robinson published several books, one after another. He did not succeed in becoming well known as an author, but had no difficulty in securing publishers for what he wrote. By and by the publishers began to ask him to give them his books for publication. This was a long step to the front. Leslie was very proud of himself. Those associated with him in business asked him why if his books were valuable to other publishers they were not valuable to him. He replied that to publish his own works would make it appear that he could not get any other house to take the risk of doing so.

Robinson married a girl with a good deal of horse sense. It did not require a long time for her to see that her husband was an excellent business man. She knew that persons are apt not to value what they are born to and are easily puffed up with a little success at what they do indifferently well. One day she had the temerity to tell her husband that he was naturally fitted for business—indeed, it was his natural vocation.

A dispute arose between them which ended in an agreement that the next novel offered by him should be under an assumed name. Robinson winced at this suggestion made by his wife, for he knew the value of a name, but he admitted that if his novel had not sufficient merit to find a publisher without his name it could not be a literary gem. At any rate, he was willing to abide by the test.

His work was sent first to the publisher who had thus far put out all his books. Within a week it was returned with a printed "unavailable" card. This was a great fall for his literary pride. For the next six months he continued to send his work to his brother publishers. Most of them kept it a long while. He thought this meant that they were making up their minds. It was not this, but that they were too busy to examine it. At the end of the six months it had gone the rounds.

The day it came back from the last publisher Robinson saw a novel advertised by one of his brother publishers, the author of which had stood trial for murder. It appalled him that this man could find a publisher and he could not. As a last resort he tried his own firm. Sending his manuscript to himself, on its arrival he turned it over to his chief reader, who sent it back to him with the following report: "The author says all he has to say remarkably well. But he has nothing to say."

No one knows why Leslie Robinson stopped writing except his wife. Friends tell him that a genius was spoiled when he went into business, but he shrugs his shoulders and says that authorship does not pay peculiarly. Mrs. Robinson looks solemn and says nothing.

AN ANSWERED PRAYER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press

"Now, Henry, I want to talk to you on a very serious matter," began Mr. Gregg's wife as they sat together one evening.

Mr. Gregg nodded and sighed. He was a bored husband. His wife had a serious subject to bring up every week or two.

"You know our Polly?" queried the wife in a half-doubting way.

Mr. Gregg was the father of Polly and ought to be fairly well acquainted with her. He nodded his head.

"Polly has another beau, and I want to know what we are going to do about it."

"I can't do anything," slowly replied the husband after a moment's thought, "but you can."

"What?"

"You can butt in and crowd Polly out and do the courting yourself, as you have done with every other beau she has had."

"Henry Gregg, may the Lord forgive you, for I never can!" wailed the wife as she covered her face with her hands.

"But I'm right," he defended. "Suppose that when a young man called here to see Polly I went to the door to shake hands with him and tell him I was glad to see him."

"Suppose I sat beside him in the parlor for fifteen minutes hinting around how nice it would be when he and Polly were married."

"Suppose I dug it at him that Polly was an angel and that he would never have a chance to marry another."

"Henry Gregg, you are an unnatural father, and I'll never speak another word to you on this matter. If Polly lives to be ninety years old and never marries it will be all your fault."

It was common gossip that Mrs. Gregg was so crazy to marry Polly off that she was making a fool of herself. No one had given her a tip, and the girl had heard nothing. No one blamed her. She was a sweet, sensible girl and didn't even realize that there was too much mother and not enough of herself about the affair.

Mrs. Gregg had received a bad setback from her husband. She felt that he had assumed a privilege as sacred as the cow of India. A daughter's love affairs and matrimonial prospects ought to be left entirely in a mother's hands. The wife had said that she wouldn't discuss the matter further with her husband, and she meant to keep her word, but she must talk to somebody. She hardly dared trust a woman, but who then?

"Why, the minister of my church, of course," she replied after casting about for a day or two.

"Are you in trouble, Sister Gregg?" asked the good man as she entered his study with tears in her eyes.

"Yes; great trouble."

"Concerning your husband?"

"Partly. He has come between me and Polly."

"Hem! How is that?"

"Why, he says I'm to let her beaus alone and that she is to manage her own affairs. Did you ever hear the like?"

Her parson had heard all the gossip about Mrs. Gregg butting in. Parsons know what is going on in their parishes as well as anybody else, but they don't repeat the gossip.

"How old is Polly?" was asked.

"Going on twenty."

"Hem! And she has another beau?"

"Yes—Will Somers."

"And he calls at the house?"

"Two or three times a week."

"I see. Young Mr. Somers is highly spoken of."

"He's just as nice as can be, parson."

"But Mr. Gregg objects to him?"

"Oh, no, no."

"Then I don't exactly understand."

"Why, I want him to know that I'm glad he's courting Polly, and Mr. Gregg says I'll drive him away. He calls it butting in."

"Yes, I believe I've heard the word before. Sister Gregg, don't you think Polly is old enough to be courted?"

"Why, yes."

"And to be courted the way other girls are?"

"Without me around?" was asked. The parson nodded his head.

"But—but I want Mr. Somers to know—know—"

"He'll know."

"Then you won't advise me?"

"I never mix up with family matters if I can avoid it."

"Well," said the discouraged woman as she rose to go. "If you won't advise me I shall at least hope you will pray for me."

"Um!" replied the parson, leaving the matter very much in doubt.

Three weeks later Mrs. Gregg fell on an icy sidewalk and broke a leg. After a couple of weeks the pastor made a call, as it was his duty to do. He found her mending and cheerful. She welcomed him with a smile and said: "I have some news for you, Polly and Mr. Somers are engaged!"

"Ah, indeed!"

"She told me this morning."

"Happy to hear it."

"And I want to say how thankful I am that you prayed for me. You did pray, didn't you?"

"Hem! Hem! Well, sister, if I did not exactly pray I thought how nice it would be for you to be laid up for several weeks and give Polly a show to do some courting, and my thought seems to have been answered!"

Friends of Memory.

As to friends of memory, Mark Twain has said that the best who know of every fact, past, present and shadow in the Mississippi river throughout its whole mighty length but could not remember what he had had for breakfast. Probably most memories are like that. One man I know has a memory that apparently collects only facts. He can always remember your age even if he forgets your name. He will memorize easily the times of all the trains to a given place, but he generally forgets the platform from which they start. Good off to him a corner of statistics, and he will recite them again to you a month later without a mistake, having in the meantime forgotten everything else about you. But then he is a born mathematician. Evidently memory is largely a question of sympathy. We remember the things we are really interested in.—London Chronicle.

Dressmaking on the Boulevards.
This picture of life in the French capital is given in Frankfort Sommerville's "In the Spirit of Paris."

An industrious woman at a newspaper kiosk sat making a jacket in the intervals between customers. A sleepy cabby, with a cigarette in his mouth, watched her at her work. Presently she put on the coat and began to fit it and fix it with pins. She was examining the sides to see how they hung.

She stooped to plant a pin. But the cabman strode up, bent and fixed it for her, with a "Voula, madam," turned to the other side, measured the distance with his eye and inserted another pin, traveled thus round the garment, doubled a clumsy plant, mumbled "It's too big here," at which she nodded, and then stood back to see the effect.

"Merci, monsieur," she said, took off the jacket and sat down. A "fare" came up; the cabman jumped to his seat, cracked his whip and was off.

Certain Differences.
"Did they never forget their differences?"
"Why, yes, in a way. He forgets that he's a gentleman, and she forgets that she's a lady."—Exchange.

Buying Versus Observing.

To buy a set of dishes is true satisfaction, but not to buy a set of dishes is to have a golden hour at the top of a great headland. Far below the set showed opal color and violet light. The clay of the cliff ranged in tone from black, through red, blue and yellow, to a creamy white; patches of sweet fern and delicate grasses grew in the crannies, glowing green, giving accent and harmony to the whole. Far below, the line of the golden beach, the white curl of the surf, were like poetry and music, and yet among the people who journeyed that day to enjoy a fair place only a few had time to go out on the cliffs and revel in color and beauty, because at a neat little stall there was a collection of perishable souvenirs for sale, and so great was the demand for them that the buyers had no time to feast their eyes elsewhere—a proof that purchasing is more interesting to the majority than observing.—Elizabeth C. Billings in Atlantic Monthly.

Daredevil Photography.

A naval photographer gets many duckings and, after a time, takes them as a matter of course. Being thrown into the sea isn't considered by him at all a serious event. It is during battleship practice that he encounters grave dangers, for much of the work done at this time is from the tops of the fighting masts, which are at an elevation of 120 feet above the sea. During different practices I have taken my position in these masts in order to get detailed pictures. Once in these basket-like tops the question is how to "stick." The gunfire photographs itself. I suppose you wonder what I mean, but it is just this: Every time the big twelve inch guns fire the awful concussion they cause invariably gives the snap to the shutter of the camera, and the exposure is made.—E. Muller, Jr., in St. Nicholas.

Mutual Sorrow.
"Harold, papa calls you a fortune hunter. I'm sorry I'm rich."
"So am I. Everybody will say that you bought me."—Life.

AMONG THE THEATRES

THE COYLE—CHARLEROI

A neat suffragette story told as a comedy was one of the features during this week at the Coyle theatre. The title of the picture was “A Possibility.” Some club men got interested in the subject of woman suffrage. They are nix-ups, in which a woman figures prominently, with the inevitable love tale being included in the general story. The production was in two reels. “Picket Guard” was a two reel Bison on Tuesday that was a spectacular photoplay. “Why a Life Home” was what the title suggests, a story of a dog. Some of the other good films of the week are: “Through Strife,” “For the Man She Loved,” “Little Buster,” “In Death's Shadow,” “Wrong Road,” and “Small-pox Scare at Gulch Hollow.” On Saturday night a three reel Bison film is booked in “When Sherman Marched to Sea.”

THE PALACE—CHARLEROI

One of the best picture shows ever given at the popular Palace Theatre was featured on Wednesday of this week when “The Miner's Destiny,” a two-reel Pathe American drama was presented. This was in addition to the regular films. Another good show is being announced for Saturday night, in a three-reel special, “The Stain of Blood.” “The Miner's Destiny” was an absorbingly interesting story, faultlessly told, proving the helplessness of mortals in the hands of Fate. It was acted by some of the best and most popular motion picture actors in the business.

Other features of this week were: “The Song Bird of the North,” “The Treachery of a Sear,” “An Old Maid's Deception,” “The Carpenter,” “What's the Matter With Father?” In the Old Dutch Times,” “His Neice From Ireland” and “Rounding up the Counterfeiter’s.”

THE LYRIC—CHARLEROI

Perhaps the biggest feature of this week and some weeks past at the Lyric theatre was the film, “The Mothering Heart,” produced in two reels. On Monday a most beautiful human interest tale was unfolded by the photoplay, showing scenes from real life, and depicting a most wonderful love story. On the same night that “The Mothering Heart” was produced two comedies were given “Mr. Jenks Buys a Dress,” and “Count Barber.” Five reels were featured by Manager Joseph Penman on Thursday in the production of four pictures. Of these a two-reel was the leading picture, “The Secret Formula,” a Pathe presentation with “The Deputy's Sweetheart,” a Western drama, “Cutie and the Girl,” and “The Black-hand” furnishing a somewhat unusual bill.

THE GRAND—PITTSBURG

“The Man on the Box,” the play selected for presentation by the Harry Davis Stock company, at the Grand Opera House for the week of August 18, is from the book of the same title written by Harold McGrath and made into a comedy in three acts by the author in collaboration with Grace Livingston Funniss. In “The Man on the Box” is a love story growing out of a man's prank in posing as a coachman. In a way he misuses, to employ a slang expression, and instead of playing the prank on his sister, discovers his victim to be another very charming, but altogether different young woman. Finding himself in a rather peculiar position, he resolves to carry out the deception and remain in the service as “the man on the box.” But he isn't to the manner born, and the habit of flunkey does not at all become him. Around this main incident the authors have grouped a chain of circumstances that for three acts sustain the interest unflaggingly.

Miss Irene Oshier will essay the role of Betty Annesley, the girl in the case, and those who know her work best expect it to be finished performance. “The Man on the Box” will be the farewell appearance as leading man of the Harry Davis players, of Charles Gunn. An excellent opportunity will be afforded Mr. Gunn's many friends, among the patrons of the Grand Opera House to witness his masterful performance of Lieutenant Roba (son), and to wish him bon voyage.

LIQUOR MEN INDICTED BY GRAND JURY

True bills were returned by the grand jury Thursday afternoon in all the cases against certain wholesale liquor dealers of Allegheny county, who had insisted on plying their trade in this county. Prosecutions were made against the men at the instance of District Attorney R. G. Miller, who several months ago warned these dealers against coming into this county to do business. Some promised to obey the warning, but some of these promises were not kept. J. G. Allen, formerly in business on the Northside, Pittsburgh, and through whom the Washington Brewing company did business, was indicted. Upon testimony offered at the last license court hearing in Allegheny county by District Attorney Miller this dealer was refused his license. He afterwards made an assignment. A warrant against him was issued by the court, against whom Allen has a suit pending to recover a bill for a large quantity of liquor sold. Comer was presumed to be a farmer, but judging from the quantity of liquor shipped him was in other business than farming.

Others indicted yesterday were: John Insley of Carnegie; F. A. Readecku, Pittsburgh; Oniero Panizza, of Bridgeville and John Speicher, of Heidelberg, near Carnegie. All the cases are set for trial on Monday, August 25, with the exception of Speicher, whose trial is set later.

Court room No. 1 was crowded with witnesses Thursday afternoon, subpoenaed in these cases. There were consumers and agents among the array of witnesses. Men and women both testified. Representatives of different express companies were among those in court. The entire afternoon from 1 o'clock to 4:30 was consumed in hearing the cases.

Other true bills returned yesterday, in addition to those against the liquor men, were the following:

PLANS ARE UNDER WAY

Charleroi to Entertain at First Teachers Institute of Kind in Valley

The teacher's institute to be held at Charleroi the first week of September for the teachers of Monongahela, Donora and Charleroi, will be featured by the presence of some of the most noted instructors in the country. Committees are getting arrangements in shape for the institute. Upon the return of Prof. Thomas L. Pollock, superintendent of the Charleroi schools, from Chautauqua, definite announcements will be made as to the place for the holding of the institute and as to the final arrangements. It has been proposed by some of the business men of Charleroi that a reception be given for the teachers while they are here and if agreeable the idea may be carried into effect.

Among the instructors for the institute will be:

Dr. Colestock, of Bucknell University; Dr. Fess, a member of the House of Representatives from Ohio; Dr. J. George Becht, Secretary of the State Board of Education, Harrisburg; Mrs. Mary G. Noss of the California Normal; Mrs. Alice M. Carmalt, assistant professor of elementary education, University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Henry S. Curtis, former secretary of the Playground Association of America; Miss Ada Van Stone Harris, University of Pittsburgh, and Prof. Charles Dobson of the California Normal music department.

Manager R. L. Barnhart of the Palace theatre is announcing a three-reel picture for production on Saturday, "The Stain," a story of love sorrow and happiness.

"The Stain" is a wonderful society drama, being a story that deals with circumstantial evidence, showing that the "god of love can do no wrong."

Duquesne to Hold Outing. Arrangements are being made by the Duquesne board of commerce for their annual outing and home coming of the town to be held at Kenywood park on Saturday, August 16. A good program has been arranged.

Boys Killed On the Rail

Two Lads Meet Death Near Webster in a Railroad Accident.

Two boys were instantly killed at Turkey Run, east of Webster at 12:48 Tuesday by a passenger train on the Lake Erie railroad. The exact nature of the accident could not be learned.

The dead boys are Fred Harrison, aged 11 years, whose home is in Donora and George Golden, aged 11 years who lives in Webster.

The dead boys are Fred Harrison, aged 11 years, whose home is in Donora and George Golden, aged 11 years who lives in Webster.

The bodies were brought to the Webster station and were later taken to their homes. The remains of both the lads are badly mutilated.

It is stated the boys were playing along the track and not noticing the approaching train were struck and killed.

EXCURSION OF ELKS IS BIG EVENT

Charleroi Lodge No. 494 Holds An Enjoyable Outing

GOES TO BROWNSVILLE

The biggest kind of a success was realized by Charleroi Lodge, No. 494, B. P. O. Elks Thursday when they held their annual outing. The outing was in the form of two boat excursions, one in the afternoon and one in the afternoon and one in the evening. Both were on the "Morning Star" excursion steamer to Brownsville and return.

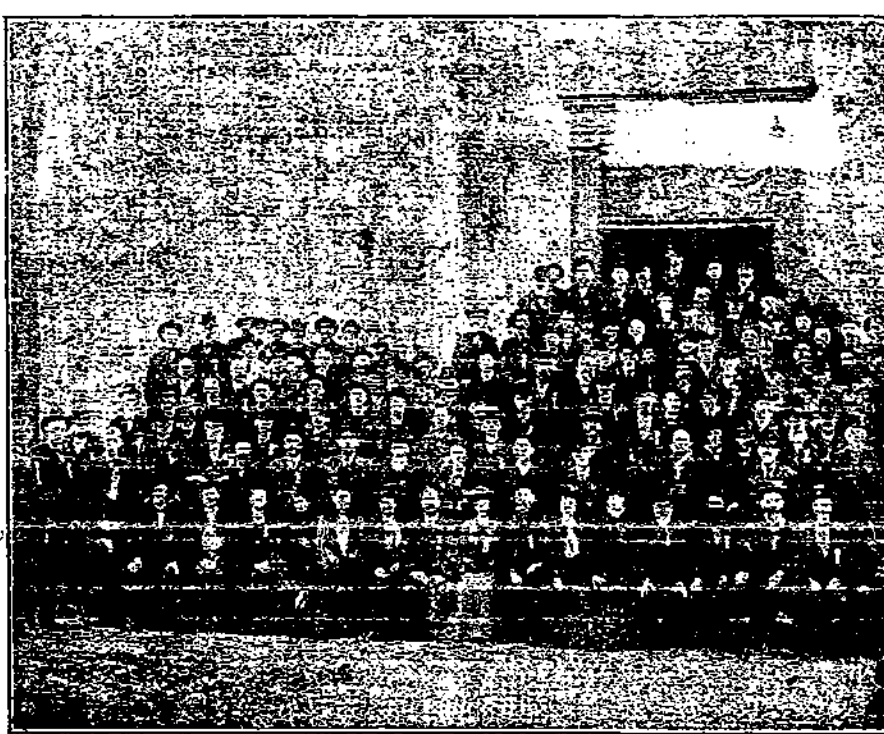

In the afternoon the boat left Charleroi in fact the afternoon excursion including a large number of children. In fact that the afternoon excursion was largely for the children. Children of members of the lodge were taken free.

The boat left for the evening excursion at about 6:30 o'clock. Although the intention had been to go to Rices Landing, Brownsville was considered far enough, owing to the rapidly rising river. Dancing was a feature. During the entire evening Elks and their friends joined in the whirl and the gaiety of the occasion. The excursion was novel and unusual and consequently very diverting. The return trip was made late at night. The committee consisting of George W. Might, Burgess George W. Risbeck, David M. McCloskey, Pierce Ferguson and Roland W. Brown, looked well to the entertainment of the guests.

ONLY OFFICER OF RINGGOLD CALVARY ALIVE TO BE HERE

Col. A. J. Greenfield to Attend Reunion of Famous Regiment at Monessen--Has Never Yet Missed Gathering--Plans Arranged

Members of the Ringgold Battalion are anticipating their annual reunion to be held at Monessen, Pa., Saturday with a great deal of pleasure and the reunion will be featured as usual by the presence of Col. A. J. Greenfield of Chicago, Ill., who perhaps is the only man who never missed a reunion of the battalion. Years ago when a reunion was held in Charleroi he was present and made a stirring address. Col. Greenfield is probably the most noted living member of the famous command. He is the only surviving regimental officer.

In a sense Charleroi is the central town of the region from which the Ringgold calvary was recruited. The company went out from Beallsville in the early sixties and became one of the most noted of Civil War companies. Pitted against the Ringgold—known as the twenty-second Pennsylvania Calvary—were the McNeill Rangers. Nearly every year that a reunion is held by the Ringgold some of the McNeill command are present. There are many more survivors however of the Ringgold than there are of the McNeill men.

This year's reunion of the Ringgold will be the thirty-ninth. There are comparatively few survivors and those who meet this year at Monessen will be impressed with the broad death has made in their ranks. Last year and the year before in Belle Vernon.

The citizens committee of Monessen, acting under auspices of the Monessen board of trade are arranging to give the heroes of the Ringgold Battalion a royal welcome. Automobiles will be furnished to the old soldiers for the evening parade, which will form at Seventh street and Denner avenue at 6:00 under the escort of the Sons of Veterans from Donora.

COUNCILMANIC POSSIBILITIES MENTIONED

With the warming up of political affairs the names of possible candidates for council are being mentioned. So far, however, few have announced. John W. Carroll the Fallowfield druggist and business man is being urged by his friends to enter the field and is considered a possibility on the Republican ticket. Samuel Michener has announced as a candidate on the Democratic ticket. William H. Calvert who is now a councilman might make the run for nomination as a Republican. Herman A. Heupel, it is believed, will enter the fight as a Washington party candidate.

Misses Anna Teitelbaum and Bertha Goldsmith have returned to New York City after visiting here.

NEWSPAPER MEN TO BE TAKEN ON TROLLEY TRIP

Newspaper men from the Monongahela valley and from inter-county points are to be taken on a trip over the Pittsburgh Railway line tomorrow at the invitation of J. E. McKirdy, advertising manager of the company. There will be a special car leave Charleroi at 8 o'clock in the morning, where those from Charleroi and surrounding towns will board it.

The first stop of importance will be at Murphy's big stock farm at Meadlands. From there the party will be taken to the Washington fair grounds for an inspection. Following that the party will go to Pittsburgh to get lunch, with a ball game between two teams of the Federal league as a side attraction. Also the newspaper men will probably be taken by Mr. McKirdy to the Pittsburgh Motordome to see the motorcycle demonstrations.

NEW RULES FOR PARCEL POST GO INTO EFFECT

County Asks Greenhouse

Institution Desired as a Part of the County Home at Arden

The poor board has asked the grand jury now sitting to approve a petition for the erection of a greenhouse at the county home. The county commissioners have approved the project. Judge McIlvaine yesterday explained to the grand jury their duties and powers in such matters. The proposed greenhouse is to cost $1,100 and will be used to start plants and raise early vegetables.

STORAGE LAW NOW IN FORCE

State Commissioner Proposes to See That It is Effective

DIXON GIVES OUT STORY

The new state cold storage law went into effect Thursday and the opening of the first day under it found retail dealers in butter and eggs striving to comply with its regulations. Retail dealers in meats and fish over the state generally, were somewhat dubious about the extent of the enactment. Meat and fish dealers say this is the season for fresh foods and that little cold storage sea foods are being sold. The majority, however, have ordered cold storage stamps.

"We have issued fifty-nine licenses with a number of applications on file, pending examinations by chemists to determine condition and availability of plants," said Daily and Food Commissioner James Foust. "Fifteen licenses have been issued in Philadelphia, where I might say we have had the heartiest co-operation from the managers of plants. Eric is second with nine plants, Pittsburgh has four and Reading two. No applications have been rejected as yet, but we have advised two plants in Philadelphia to make some changes in condition by September 1. These are minor details and I have no doubt will be attended to without delay as managers realize that the state wants to help them. Experts are now on the job making inspections throughout the state and on their reports more licenses will be issued."

"There will be a general housecleaning as a result of the act and the people need have no fear of the goods sent out from cold storage warehouses," the commissioner said, "because all must be marked, and stuff which has been in storage beyond the time limit fixed by the act will be outlawed. A system of tags has been provided which will warn everyone. Under the system of quarterly reports we will know just what is sent into storage and how long it is kept."

High Cost of Living Given Another Severe Swat

MAV CHILD NOW BY MAIL

Household Necessities May be Sent--Weight Limits Are Changed

Housewives with the assistance of Uncle Sam and the agency of his postoffice department are able to give another swat to the "high-cost-of-living" bugbear with the new parcel post regulations in effect today. Besides reducing the rate cost the new law also permits the mailing of butter, lard, fish, fresh meats, dressed fowls, vegetables, fruits, berries, and articles of similar nature which decay quickly in the first and second zones, "when inclosed in an inner cover and a strong outer cover of wood, metal, heavy corrugated pasteboard or other suitable material and wrapped so that nothing can leak from the package."

Extending the mailable distance of perishable foods to the second zone, 150 miles from Charleroi in any direction, opens a broad area of farming country to Charleroi. Previously foods likely to decay were mailable only in the first zone—or within a radius of 50 miles. The opportunity now afforded to local housewives is declared to be a great one, coupling the extension of distance with a marked decrease in rates.

One postmaster says: "Tried as an experiment, the parcel post gradually is becoming an immense help to housewives. The department a month ago discarded the special parcel post stamp. Now the weight limit is advanced from 11 to 20 pounds and the rate from the second zone out of Pittsburgh on an 11-pound package is reduced from 46 to 15 cents. The new rate for a parcel weighing more than five pounds sent from the second zone to Pittsburgh is slightly more than a cent a pound. One cent a pound is mighty cheap and if the carrying continues to show a profit, I see no reason why the weight limit should not be raised still farther."

General order No. 7349, issued by Postmaster General A. S. Burleson, and which is in effect today regulates the parcel post rate as follows:

"The rate of postage on parcels exceeding four ounces in weight shall be five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional two pounds or fraction thereof, when intended for local delivery and five cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound or fraction thereof when intended for delivery at other offices within the first and second zones."

THE FAMILY REUNION.

This is the season of the family re-
union, the time of year when the folk
bound together by blood and name
meet together for a day and renew
the old friendship and talk over the
old times, says the Washington Reporter.

"The family reunion is an excellent
institution. It gives members of
families opportunity to get acquaint-
ed with each other and find out what
sort of people there are within the
bounds of their family. Too often in
the hurly-burly of present day existence relationships beyond immediate
family ties are almost forgotten and
the only place where cousins and un-
cles and aunts meet is at the funeral
of some member of the connection.

"It is a mistake for families to be-
come so far divided that the various
members lose all track of one another.
Blood should be thicker than water
even if that does not always seem
to be the case. The family reunion
is one big thing which tends to bring
members of families together, on a
satisfactory footing. The family reunion rightly handled should be a
large means toward doing away with
many of the old family feuds which
have made so much unhappiness and
misery in the world.

"Of late years the family reunion
idea has been gaining many adher-ents. Every year sees more of these
pleasant and profitable gatherings
held. Washington county and the general section of the country have
been especially progressive in this direction.

"May the family reunion be a permanent institution. May the idea grow
and spread so that one day cousins
even many times removed will at least
be able to recognize each other when
they chance to meet."

MUNICIPAL EXTRAVAGANCE

Possible legal and practical objections wholly aside, would it not be a
fine idea if the bonds of a city could
be widely distributed in small amounts
among a large number of its citizens,
like the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A municipal bond tucked away
in the back book of a business man or a pigeonhole of the desk at

home or placed in a safety deposit
box would be a material emblem of
one's partnership in government affairs. It would be a tremendous incentive for a person to keep posted
on what that government was doing.
It would encourage the bond owner
to protest at city hall extravagance,
at wastefulness and inefficiency.

Perhaps the day will arrive when it
will be possible for a person to buy
municipal bonds in small denomina-
tions, as easily as he can now deposit his savings in a bank. Any man attempting to debauch a
city government whose debt is held
by its own people. His days would
be too few to be worth numbering.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

Sherwood Magee was still harping
on a close decision which Umpire
Bill Klem had given against the Phillies in an early inning when another case came up. The Phillies' opposing team was favored.

"There's two you gave them, Bill,"
Magee snarled at Klem.

The game raged along so close a
run would have decided the issue.
One of the Phil-
batters fired a fly to left. There were two on the bases. Magee played the lick poorly and muffed the ball. The two baserunners crossed the plate with what proved to be the
winning runs.

Magee tried to avoid Klem as he
walked to the bench after the inning,
but Bill was alert. He sauntered
close to Magee and said:
"I didn't give them those two, did
I?"

Jones was showing his wife and
her friend, Mrs. Brown, around the new office. He left them in the waiting room for a few minutes,
while he answered a telephone call
and the conversation between the two
women drifted to household matters.
"And have you put up much fruit
this year, Mrs. Jones?" asked Mrs.
Brown.

"Not very much so far," answered
Mrs. Jones, "but," as her gaze wan-
dered across the room, where several
pretty stenographers were working,
"I intend to can a few peaches very
soon."—Judge

JUSTICE SHOWS HOW GRAFTING IS MADE EASY

After admitting in open court the
truth of charges of extortion brought
against him E. C. Fullick, former
justice of the peace in Canonsburg
on Thursday made public an affida-
vit in which he calmly recites methods
in vogue among grafting peace officers, tells how he carried on his own
schemes of extortion and makes
charges of the most serious nature
against 10 constables of the Canons-
burg district.

Fullick declares he stands ready to
give the district attorney all possible
aid in clearing up the grafters and begs a further investigation of the claims he makes.

He states that he took up his duties
as a justice in December 1911. The

Justices, Constable John Miller of Can-
onsburg, came to him and offered to
give him a few pointers in the justice
business. He took them to him and it would not do to jump in and close
things up as the people were accustomed to a more open town. Fullick
says that Miller took him on a round of sightseeing. Fullick recounts a visit to places apparently
operating in violation of the law,
where he says he saw money paid
to the constable.

Miller, according to Fullick was in
partnership with another constable
named Crum and Fullick says that the two constables entered into a business arrangement by which
all three profited.

four heats were necessary and Lord

Living Cups and Saucers.

The foot of the limpet is a kind of
sucking disk by which it anchors itself
securely to the rocks. Its tiny tongue
is in reality a wonderful horny structure armed with about 100 rows of
teeth with which it rasps the sea
weed and marine litter which form
its food.

There are several branches of the
limpet family. One is called the "key-
hole" limpet and another the "cup and
saucer." The former owes its name
to a keyhole shaped opening on the
top through which the animal—for the
limpet is really an animal—squirts out
water.

The "cup and saucer" limpet has on
its underside a sort of curved plate,
not unlike a tiny teacup, surrounded
by a saucer-like shell. To complete the
resemblance there is at the extremity
of the long tooth ribbon an organ not
unlike a miniature teaspoon.

Mental Originality.

Anatole France coined a phrase
which may have the breath of life in
it. "What is madness after all," he
says, "but a sort of mental original-
ity?" He writes that Charles Dickens
always liked madmen and cites among
the madmen good Mr. Dick in "David Copperfield," whose innocence is described with such tender grace. "I
believe," writes the great Frenchman
of letters, "that Dickens had more
feeling than any other writer. I believe that his novels are as beautiful
as the love and pity that inspired
them. I regard 'David Copperfield' as
a new gospel. I believe, lastly, that
Mr. Dick is a 'sensible' madman, be-
the reasoning of the heart, and that is
hardly ever received. What matter if
he does fly kites on which he has
written some reflections concerning
the death of King Charles I? He is
benevolent, he wishes ill to no one,
and that is a piece of wisdom to which
many sane men do not so easily attain
as he."

Involuntary Fasting.

A remarkable feat of involuntary
fasting was performed twelve years
ago by a corporal in a regiment of French colonial infantry. On his way
to work one morning a man heard
cries proceeding from a disused mine
near Brest. At the bottom of an excavation nearly 100 feet deep Corporal
Andre Desrats was found in so weak
a condition that he could scarcely articulate a word. When he recovered
his rescuers learned that after accidentally falling into the mine Desrats
had been imprisoned for twenty-eight
days without anything to eat or drink.
But a pig can beat a man. Dr. W. B.
Carpenter in his "Manual of Physiology" records that a pig weighing 160
pounds was entombed by the fall of a
portion of the chalk cliffs at Dover.
It was dug out 30 days later and found to be alive, but reduced in
weight to forty pounds.—London Mail

An Author - Publisher

By ANDREW C. EWING

Leslie Robinson was the son of a publisher. His father said to him one day when the boy was lurching at being made editor of the high school Banner: "My boy, don't get the literary fever. A great many catch it, and only those recover in whom the literary parasites find nothing to feed on. I fear you have just enough talent for writing to make you uncomfortable all your life."

Alas, the young are not so constituted as to take the advice of the old. Perhaps this is best as it is. It is not success that brings happiness; it is striving for success. But in literary work for all but one in a million there are constant disappointments.

Young Robinson was so unfortunate, according to his father's idea, when he went to college as to be made editor of the university magazine. His essays received the highest marks. He was unconscious of the fact that the reason they took high rank was because those with which they competed were of no value as literary productions.

Mr. Robinson, Sr., died while his son was in college. The publishing business, by the late owner's injunction, was to be carried on, till Leslie was graduated, by the junior partner, after which the son was to manage the interests he had inherited. He proved to have business capacity and soon became the brains of the establishment.

Perhaps if Leslie Robinson had appreciated his business talents he might have lost his desire for literary eminence. He considered himself rather born to literature than to business. Finding time to manage a publishing house and scribble, at the same time he did both. He sent articles to the magazines, and they were always accepted. They were good articles, so that it was not necessary for Mr. Robinson to ask how much their acceptance was due to their merit and how much to their having been offered by the head of the publishing house of Robinson & Co.

After awhile Mr. Robinson brought out a novel. It was accepted by the first publisher to whom it was offered. Robinson scorned to publish it himself. He said that the test of a good book is that a business man will risk his money on it. It cost several thousand dollars to get out an edition of a book, and unless the article was of sufficient merit to insure a return it would not find a publisher. He was still young in the business or he would have known that the higher the type the less the profit. The poor Browning would have starved had he been forced to live on the income he derived from his poems.

Robinson published several books, one after another. He did not succeed in becoming well known as an author, but had no difficulty in securing publishers for what he wrote. By and by the publishers began to ask him to give them his books for publication. This was a long step to the front. Leslie was very proud of himself. Those associated with him in business asked him why if his books were valuable to other publishers they were not valuable to him. He replied that to publish his own works would make it appear that he could not get any other house to take the risk of doing so.

Robinson married a girl with a good deal of horse sense. It did not require a long time for her to see that her husband was an excellent business man. She knew that persons are apt not to value what they are born to and are easily puffed up with a little success at what they do indifferently well. One day she had the temerity to tell her husband that he was naturally fitted for business—indeed, it was his natural vocation.

A dispute arose between them which ended in an agreement that the next novel offered by him should be under an assumed name. Robinson winced at this suggestion made by his wife, for he knew the value of a name, but he admitted that if his novel had not sufficient merit to find a publisher without his name it could not be a literary gem. At any rate, he was willing to abide by the test.

His work was sent first to the publisher who had thus far put out all his books. Within a week it was returned with a printed "unavailable" card. This was a great fall for his literary pride. For the next six months he continued to send his work to his brother publishers. Most of them kept it a long while. He thought this meant that they were making up their minds. It was not this, but that they were too busy to examine it. At the end of the six months it had gone the rounds.

The day it came back from the last publisher Robinson saw a novel advertised by one of his brother publishers, the author of which had stood trial for murder. It appalled him that this man could find a publisher and he could not. As a last resort he tried his own firm. Sending his manuscript to himself, on its arrival he turned it over to his chief reader, who sent it back to him with the following report: "The author says all he has to say remarkably well. But he has nothing to say."

No one knows why Leslie Robinson stopped writing except his wife. Friends tell him that a genius was spoiled when he went into business, but he shrugs his shoulders and says that authorship does not pay pecuniarily. Mrs. Robinson looks solemn and says nothing.

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

"Now, Henry, I want to talk to you on a very serious matter," began Mr. Gregg's wife as they sat together one evening.

Mr. Gregg nodded and sighed. He was a bored husband. His wife had a serious subject to bring up every week or two.

"You know our Polly?" queried the wife in a half-doubting way.

Mr. Gregg was the father of Polly and ought to be fairly well acquainted with her. He nodded his head.

"Polly has another beau, and I want to know what we are going to do about it."

"I can't do anything," slowly replied the husband after a moment's thought, "but you can."

"What?"

"You can butt in and crowd Polly out and as the courting yourself, as you have done with every other beau she has had."

"Henry Gregg, may the Lord forgive you, for I never can," wailed the wife as she covered her face with her hands.

"But I'm right," he defended. "Suppose that when a young man called here to see Polly I went to the door to shake hands with him and tell him I was glad to see him."

"Suppose I sat beside him in the parlor for fifteen minutes hinting around how nice it would be when he and Polly were married."

"Suppose I dinged it at him that Polly was an angel and that he would never have a chance to marry another."

"Henry Gregg, you are an unnatural father, and I'll never speak another word to you on this matter. If Polly lives to be ninety years old and never marries it will be all your fault."

It was common gossip that Mrs. Gregg was so crazy to marry Polly off that she was making a fool of herself. No one had given her a tip, and the girl had heard nothing. No one blamed her. She was a sweet, sensible girl and didn't even realize that there was too much mother and not enough of herself about the affair.

Mrs. Gregg had received a bad setback from her husband. She felt that he had usurped a privilege as sacred as the cow of India. A daughter's love affairs and matrimonial prospects ought to be left entirely in a mother's hands. The wife had said that she wouldn't discuss the matter further with her husband, and she meant to keep her word, but she must talk to somebody. She hardly dared trust a woman, but who then?

"Why, the minister of my church, of course," she replied after casting about for a day or two.

"Are you in trouble, Sister Gregg?" asked the good man as she entered his study with tears in her eyes.

"Yes; great trouble."

"Concerning your husband?"

"Partly. He has come between me and Polly."

"Hem! How is that?"

Her parson had heard all the gossip about Mrs. Gregg butting in. Parsons know what is going on in their parishes as well as anybody else, but they don't repeat the gossip.

"How old is Polly?" was asked.

"Going on twenty."

"Hem! And she has another beau?"

"Yes—Will Somers."

"And he calls at the house?"

"Two or three times a week."

"I see. Young Mr. Somers is highly spoken of."

"He's just as nice as can be, parson."

"But Mr. Gregg objects to him?"

"Oh, no, no."

"Then I don't exactly understand."

"Why, I want him to know that I'm glad he's courting Polly, and Mr. Gregg says I'll drive him away. He calls it butting in."

"Yes, I believe I've heard the word before. Sister Gregg, don't you think Polly is old enough to be courted?"

"Why, yes."

"And to be courted the way other girls are?"

"Without me around?" was asked.

The parson nodded his head.

"But—but I want Mr. Somers to know—know—"

"He'll know."

"Then you won't advise me?"

"I never mix up with family matters if I can avoid it."

"Well," said the discouraged woman as she rose to go, "if you won't advise me I shall at least hope you will pray for me."

"Um!" replied the parson, leaving the matter very much in doubt.

Three weeks later Mrs. Gregg fell on an icy sidewalk and broke a leg. After a couple of weeks the pastor made a call, as it was his duty to do. He found her mending and cheerful. She welcomed him with a smile and said:

"I have some news for you, Pastor and Mr. Somers are engaged!"

"Ah, indeed?"

"She told me this morning."

"Happy to hear it."

"And I want to say how thankful I am that you prayed for me. You did pray, didn't you?"

"Hem! Hem! Well, sister, if I did not exactly pray I thought how nice it would be for you to be laid up for several weeks and give Polly a show to do some courting, and my thought seems to have been answered!"

Tricks of Memory.

As to tricks of memory, Mark Twain has told us of the man who knew every word of the Bible, current and obsolete, in the Mississippi river throughout its whole mighty length, but could not remember what he had and for breakfast. Probably most memories are like that. One man I know has a memory that apparently collects only facts; he can always remember your age even if he forgets your name. He will memorize easily the times of all the trains to a given place, but he generally forgets the platforms from which they start. Good-bye to him a corner of statistics, and he will recite them again to you a month later without a mistake, having in the meantime forgotten everything else about you. Evidently memory is largely a question of sympathy. We remember the things we are really interested in.—Louder Chronicle.

Dressmaking on the Boulevards.
This picture of life in the French capital is given in Frankfort Souvenir in "In the Spirit of Paris."

An industrious woman at a newspaper kiosk sat making a jacket in the intervals between customers. A sleepy cabby, with a cigarette in his mouth, watched her at her work. Presently she put on the coat and began to fit it and fix it with pins. She was examining the sides to see how they hung.

She stooped to plant a pin. But the cabman strode up, bent and fixed it for her, with a "Volla, madam," turned to the other side, measured the distance with his eye and inserted another pin, traveled thus round the garment, doubled a clumsy pleat, mumbled "It's too big here," at which she nodded, and then stood back to see the effect.

"Merci, monsieur," she said, took off the jacket and sat down. A "fare-came on; the cabman jumped to his seat, cracked his whip and was off.

Certain Differences.

"Did they never forget their differences?"

"Why, yes, in a way. He forgot that he's a gentleman, and she forgot that she's a lady."—Exchange.

Buying a Boat for Fishing.

To buy which has its true satisfaction, but just what seems to have irresistible attraction for the human mind. We were spending a golden hour at the top of a great headland. Far below the sea showed opal color and violet light. The clay of the cliff rugged in tone from black, through red, blue and yellow, to a creamy white; patches of sweet fern and delicate grasses grew in the crannies, glowing green, giving accent and harmony to the whole. Far below, the line of the golden beach, the white curl of the surf, were like poetry and music, and yet among the people who journeyed that day to enjoy a fair place only a few had time to go out on the cliffs and revel in color and beauty, because at a neat little stall there was a collection of perishable souvenirs for sale, and so great was the demand for them that the buyers had no time to feast their eyes elsewhere—a proof that purchasing is more interesting to the majority than observing.—Elizabeth C. Billings in Atlantic Monthly.

Daredevil Photography.

A naval photographer gets many duckings and, after a time, takes them as a matter of course. Being thrown into the sea isn't considered by him at all a serious event. It is during battleship practice that he encounters grave dangers, for much of the work done at this time is from the tops of the fighting masts, which are at an elevation of 120 feet above the sea. During different practices I have taken my position in these masts in order to get detailed pictures. Once in these basket-like tops the question is how to "stick." The gunfire photographs itself. I suppose you wonder what I mean, but it is just this: Every time the big twelve inch guns fire the awful concussion they cause invariably gives the snap to the shutter of the camera, and the exposure is made.—E. Muller, Jr., in St. Nicholas.

Mutual Sorrow.

"Harold, papa calls you a fortune hunter. I'm sorry I'm rich."

"So am I. Everybody will say that you bought me."—Life.

THE COYLE--CHARLEROI

A neat suffragette story told as a comedy was one of the features during this week at the Coyle theatre. The title of the picture was "A Possibility." Some club men got interested in the subject of woman suffrage. They are mixups, in which a woman figures prominently, with the inevitable love tale being included in the general story. The production was in two reels. "Picket Guard" was a two reel Bison on Tuesday that was a spectacular photoplay. "Why Not Let Him?" was what the title suggests, a story of a dog. Some of the other good films of the week are: "Tough Strife," "For the Man She Loved," "Little Buster," "In Death's Shadow," "Wrong Road" and "Smallpox Scare at Gulch Hollow." On Saturday night a three reel Bison film is booked in "When Sherman Marched to Sea."

THE PALACE--CHARLEROI

One of the best picture shows ever given at the popular Palace Theatre was featured on Wednesday of this week when "The Miner's Destiny," a two-reel Pathe American drama was presented. This was in addition to the regular films. Another good show is being announced for Saturday night, in a three-reel special, "The Stain of Blood." "The Miner's Destiny" was an absorbingly interesting story, faultlessly told, proving the helplessness of mortals in the hands of Fate. It was acted by some of the best and most popular motion picture actors in the business.

Other features of this week were: "The Song Bird of the North," "The Treachery of a Scar," "An Old Maid's Deception," "The Carpenter," "What's the Matter With Father?" In the Old Dutch Times, "His Niece From Ireland" and "Rounding up the Counterfeiters."

THE LYRIC--CHARLEROI

Perhaps the biggest feature of this week and some weeks past at the Lyric theatre was the film, "The Mothering Heart," produced in two reels. On Monday a most beautiful human interest tale was unfolded by the photoplay, showing scenes from real life, and depicting a most wonderful love story. On the same night that "The Mothering Heart" was produced two comedies were given "Mr. Jenks Buys a Dress," and "Count Barber." Five reels were featured by Manager Joseph Penman on Thursday in the production of four pictures. Of these a two-reel was the leading picture, "The Secret Formula" a Pathe presentation with "The Deputy's Sweetheart," a Western drama. "Cutty and the Girl," and "The Black-hand" furnishing a somewhat unusual bill.

THE GRAND--PITTSBURG

"The Man on the Box," the play selected for presentation by the Harry Davis Stock company at the Grand Opera House for the week of August 18, is from the book of the same title written by Harold McGrath and made into a comedy in three acts by the author in collaboration with Grace Livingston Follis. In "The Man on the Box" is a love story growing out of a man's prank in posing as a coachman. In a way he misuses, to employ a slang expression, and instead of playing the prank on his sister, discovers his victim to be another very charming, but altogether different young woman. Finding himself in a rather peculiar position, he resolves to carry out the deception and remain in the service as "the man on the box." But he isn't to the manner born, and the habit of flunkey does not at all become him. Around this main incident the authors have grouped a chain of circumstances that for three acts sustain the interest unflinchingly.

Miss Irene Oshier will essay the role of Betty Annesley, the girl in the case, and those who know her work best expect it to be finished performance. "The Man on the Box" will be the farewell appearance as leading man of the Harry Davis players, of Charles Gunn. An excellent opportunity will be afforded Mr. Gunn to display his talents as an actor of the Grand Opera House to witness his masterful performance of Lieutenant Roberson, and to wish him bon voyage.

True bills were returned by the grand jury Thursday afternoon in all the cases against certain wholesale liquor dealers of Allegheny county, who had insisted on plying their trade in this county. Prosecutions were made against the men at the instance of District Attorney R. G. Miller, who several months ago warned these dealers against coming into this county to do business. Some of these promises were not kept.

J. C. Allen, formerly in business on the Northside, Pittsburgh, and through whom the Washington Brewing company did business, was indicted. Upon testimony offered at the last license court hearing in Allegheny county by District Attorney Miller this dealer was refused his license. He afterwards made an assignment. A woman's alleged name was Joe Comer, of Westland, against whom Allen has a suit pending to recover a bill for a large quantity of liquor sold Comer. Comer was presumed to be a farmer, but judging from the quantity of liquor shipped him was in other business than farming.

Others indicted yesterday were John Insley of Carnegie; F. A. Rebecko, Pittsburgh; Omero Panizza, of Bridgeville and John Speicher, of Henscheid, near Carnegie. All the cases are set for trial on Monday, August 25, with the exception of Speicher, whose trial is set later.

Court room No 1 was crowded with witnesses Thursday afternoon, subpoenaed in these cases. There were consumers and agents among the array of witnesses. Men and women both testified. Representatives of different express companies were among those in court. The entire afternoon from 1 o'clock to 4:30 was consumed in hearing the cases.

Other true bills returned yesterday, in addition to those against the liquor men, were the following:
